

NAZIMOVA RETURNS IN HASTINGS PLAY

"That Sort." Written Especially for Russian Actress.
Produced at the Harris.

PART SUITS HER TALENTS

"That Sort"—At the Harris Theatre, the Russian actress, Nazimova, returns to the stage in a play written especially for her. The play, "That Sort," is a comedy in three acts, written by George Tyler, and is produced at the Harris Theatre.

Another effort was made last night to make the great and discerning writers on the subject of her Slav genius—of Nazimova. It was George Tyler who was this time engaged in this fascinating, sensitive problem of the impressionable and the little Harris Theatre was the scene of his experiment.

It is not easy to find suitable means of combining the interesting personality and the unusual technical skill of this gifted actress. With the so-called emotional French repertoire of the late Fox out of the question, although she would have found there her greatest opportunities—then served for a short time as a means. The public not only wearies of the plays, but Nazimova's growing tendency to emphasize the characteristics of her art as well as her physical peculiarities, gradually came to disqualify her for any sort of play in which realism, even when aided by her fine imagination, was an important element. How little she could adapt herself to the ordinary run of the modern plays of the commercial stage her experience under Charles Frohman showed. It was really Henry Miller who revealed her talents in their best light. But she happened to have an artistic conscience in those days which grew less strict as she made a place for herself in the American theatre.

New Play Suits Her.

George Tyler was wise enough to put her forward last night in a play adapted to her talents, a play which was in fact written to measure, just as Chauncey Olcott's "The New Sin" was a play written to the measure of the talents of the actor.

"That Sort" is a comedy in three acts, written by George Tyler, and is produced at the Harris Theatre. It is a play which is well within the conventions of that original school which might have suited Mme. Nazimova so well and the taste of the public for Mexican and Russian, Rabelais, Dumas and Feuilleton did not disappear.

Mr. Hastings took the guilty mother, and the Russian actress was, in a measure, a free woman. The play is set in a hotel in London suffering from the effects of drugs and dissipation. She tells the doctor who is called to rescue her that she is Diana Lusk, once a dancer in Vienna, and later the bride of an English gentleman. Now she is his former wife, divorced through her own fault. For twelve years she has lived as her physician tells her, in a life of luxury and dissipation. She is now married to a second time, is a friend of the physician. So he promises to help the abandoned wife.

The scene changes from the room in London hotel to the house in Carlton Terrace, wherein lives the former husband with his family. Hither comes the mother, now restored to health after a month in the country—that pancreas for all his moral and physical. She forces herself into the family, the watching exposure if she is driven out. Like the heroine invented by Mrs. John Wood and later transported to France by Adolphe Beland, she is an old maid, a spinster, a little stepmother of her daughter, but will be near enough to this child to see and know her. She remains in the house in Carlton Terrace, in the spirit of the play which is a masterpiece of the modern drama he is seeking to write.

"Gold Palm" Arrives.
Her daughter, although only 17, is already engaged to be married, not to the young man favored by her family, but to an older one whose fascinations she has resisted. Her mother learns that this man is an old maid, a spinster, a little stepmother of her daughter, but will be near enough to this child to see and know her. She remains in the house in Carlton Terrace, in the spirit of the play which is a masterpiece of the modern drama he is seeking to write.

Mr. Hastings used this familiar material with some effect in certain scenes, and the interest in the last act was far greater than in any other. The play is a comedy in three acts, written by George Tyler, and is produced at the Harris Theatre. It is a play which is well within the conventions of that original school which might have suited Mme. Nazimova so well and the taste of the public for Mexican and Russian, Rabelais, Dumas and Feuilleton did not disappear.

Good Acting Under Difficulties.

It was the same unpreparedness of the actress to the subject of the play, the play, "That Sort," is a comedy in three acts, written by George Tyler, and is produced at the Harris Theatre. It is a play which is well within the conventions of that original school which might have suited Mme. Nazimova so well and the taste of the public for Mexican and Russian, Rabelais, Dumas and Feuilleton did not disappear.

The situation continues satisfactory.—Official report.

WEDDING PLANS FOR MISS FLOWER FIXED

To Become Bride of Clarence M. Chauncey December 5 at Tuxedo Park.

MANY WEDDINGS TO-DAY

Plans have been completed for the marriage of Miss Estelle Howard Flower, daughter of Mrs. James de Laval Flower, to Clarence M. Chauncey, which will take place on December 5 at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Pierre Lorillard Barbey, in Tuxedo Park. Guests will leave by a special train from this city. The wedding ceremony will be performed at 1 o'clock by the Rev. George Lindsey of Hartford, uncle of the bridegroom.

The bride attendants will be Mrs. Harlow and Miss Helen Ladd of Portland, Me., a cousin of the bride. The bridesmaids will be Misses Lillian Talbot, Miss Hildegarde Gardner, to Robert Billings Hill of Calcutta, India, formerly of Boston. No date has been mentioned for the wedding.

DEBUTANTE BALL AT TUXEDO.

Many Dinners Precede Autumn Affairs Held Annually.

Tuxedo Park, Nov. 6.—Tuxedo celebrated to-night one of the largest social affairs of the season by giving the annual autumn ball at the Tuxedo Club. Every cottage entertained parties and the ball surpassed those of other years because of the large attendance of the young people. It was really a debutante ball. Dinners as usual took place at the club and in cottages before the dance.

Mrs. E. H. Hartman had a house party at Arden House, taking her party to the ball after dinner. Mr. and Mrs. William Plerson Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Earle Stevens and Mrs. Charles W. Clinton also entertained.

Man From Florida Wins Fur Coat—Prologue Precedes Clothes Show.

HEARST CALLS ANTIQUE A FAKE.

Says Elizabethan Chimneyplace Bought of Charles Was Fraud.

An allegation by William R. Hearst that he was defrauded in the purchase of a supposed Elizabethan chimneyplace, which he paid $4,000 for, has been made public by the dealers with an office at 715 Fifth avenue, is made in a suit filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by Mr. Hearst to recover $3,000 on the ground that the chimneyplace is not genuine and that the copy of the article was described by the dealers as a "very fine carved stone Elizabethan chimneyplace bearing the arms and supporters of the Verispliff Company of Tallow Chandeliers."
